

Indigenous Borderlands in North America Symposium

Wednesday, November 2 - Saturday, November 5, 2022
National Hispanic Cultural Center, Albuquerque, New Mexico
More information at: <https://ib2022.unm.edu/>

This symposium seeks to develop new borderland and border-crossing approaches to continental North America that center Indigenous peoples, homelands, political concerns, and related dynamics – temporally and spatially expanding borderlands frameworks.

Academics and Community Members Together

Bringing historians in strategic conversation with scholars of other disciplines and with Indigenous community members, we ask how cross-disciplinary and community-facing dialogue can advance humanistic knowledge, developing new ways to envision borders, crossings, histories, and futures in contexts of social and environmental change.

First in a Series

This launches a series of international conferences on Indigenous borderlands in American and global contexts.

Sponsors include: Western Hemisphere Center—Guadalupe Institute, National Endowment for the Humanities; Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council, Canada (SSHRC); Center for Regional Studies, UNM; Alfonso Ortiz Center for Intercultural Studies, UNM; Latin American and Iberian Institute (LAI), UNM; UNM Office of Vice President for Research (OVPR); College of Arts & Sciences, UNM; Institute for American Indian Research (IFAIR), UNM; Center for the Southwest, UNM; Biology Department, UNM; History Department, Princeton; Sustainability Studies, UNM; R.H. Mallory Center for Community Geography; American Studies Department, UNM; History Department, UNM; National Hispanic Cultural Center; Native American Studies, UNM